"How To Overcome Writer's Block" If you've ever been afflicted with writer's block, you'll know it's no laughing matter - it can impede your writing for days, weeks, or even months. With the worst cases of writer's block, you might even have inflicted permanent damage to your work! Luckily for you, I've discovered a simple technique that will help you overcome these blockages once and for all. To start with, let's take a look at what causes writer's block. We all know what it is - the desire to write is present, but the words simply won't come out. This can be devastatingly frustrating - it feels as if your mind is completely blank, as if there is absolutely nothing in there. In fact, this seems strangely familiar... When you think about it, this is actually the same feeling you get when your computer won't turn on! If this sounds familiar, then it's time to start cooking - you're about to unleash the power of your mind onto your work! Of course, to do this, we need a little bit of hardware. Unfortunately I don't have any software that will allow your mind to communicate directly with your computer - if I did, I'd be writing all my articles in my head. But what I can do is install two pieces of software on your computer: Alcohol 120% and Virtual Clone Drive. The combination of these two pieces of software will make you feel like you're writing the actual words on the screen, and I promise - once you start cooking (or else it's time to see a doctor), your brain will start to get organized and produce the right words. This technique is known as Alcohol 120%, and it's used by many professional writers. They probably use it because it's the only way to get them writing fast enough to finish a novel in a single day. Now - where was I? Ah yes, installing the software. Use Virtual Clone Drive to install Alcohol 120% if you're asked which drive to use. The default settings should be fine, so go ahead and install without changing anything. Once installed, you can run Alcohol 120%. You'll know it's running when the words 'Alcohol' and '120%' fill your whole screen.
